RAINFOREST
TRUST®

Companies throughout the world are deploying their unique blend of innovation and resources to address complex sustainability challenges. Yet to truly achieve a sustainable future, companies must scale their efforts by working in partnership with other sectors of society, like nonprofits. Rainforest Trust provides a proven model for making a difference with a global impact. By collaborating with Rainforest Trust to meet the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals, your company can shape a sustainable future for us all.

What are the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals?

Established in 2016, the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) are a set of 17 global goals and 169 targets that provide a path for society to work together and create a world without extreme poverty, inequality or climate change by 2030.

Why should your company get involved?

The only way to achieve the United Nations' ambitious vision is if we all work together. SDGs are a unique opportunity for companies and nonprofits to partner, realizing results at a scale that benefits the entire world. Through this partnership, your business can:

- Innovate
- Ensure brand relevance
- Create stronger connections with your customers, clients, investors and employees
- Tell stories about your impact that are based in real, on-the-ground action

What are the benefits of partnering with Rainforest Trust?

Rainforest Trust's unique, cost-effective conservation model for protecting endangered species has been implemented successfully for more than 30 years. So far, we have protected more than 41.8 million acres in 68 countries. Thanks to the generosity of our donors, the expertise of our partners and the participation of local communities—through strategies like indigenous land titling and community-managed areas—our reserves are exemplary models of international conservation. Our solution works: 99% of the forest in our reserves has remained standing post-protection. With Rainforest Trust's experience and proven results, we can help your business align the specific goal or goals consistent with your brand, values and vision.
